

The Riverside Way

The Riverside Way sets out expectations for all members: players, coaches, team officials (managers, referees, assistant referees, trainers) parents and care givers. It defines how we play, coach, manage and support junior rugby union at Riverside.

It is underpinned by respect and the recognition that Riverside is built on volunteers who give up their time and energy to provide players of all abilities a safe and enjoyable rugby experience.

As Players:

- We play and train within the rules of the game.
- We show our coaches respect, we listen and follow instructions.
- We show the referee respect and understand that without the referee there is no game.
- We show the opposition respect and are never negative about the opposition.
- We are humble winners and gracious losers.
- We are good sports.

As Coaches:

- We set clear standards of behaviour for our team and enforce them.
- We encourage fair play and do not tolerate foul play.
- We show the referee respect and understand that without the referee there is no game.
- We show the opposition respect and are never negative about the opposition.
- We are humble winners and gracious losers.
- We are good sports.

As Team Officials:

- We show the referee respect and understand that without the referee there is no game.
- We show the opposition respect and are never negative about the opposition.
- We are humble winners and gracious losers.
- We are good sports.

As Parents and Caregivers:

- We are willing volunteers.
- We show the referee respect and understand that without the referee there is no game.
- We show the opposition respect and are never negative about the opposition.
- We are humble winners and gracious losers.
- We are good sports.
